

CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS ISSUE

Evdokia Karavas-Doukas has worked extensively in language and teacher education in Greece. She holds a Ph.D. from the University of Warwick where she is a Research Assistant with active interests in the area of classroom centred research and teacher education.

Corony Edwards is a lecturer in English Language at the Centre for English Language Studies, University of Birmingham where she is responsible for the BA (ELT) programme. She also acts as Assessor for the RSA/UCLES CTEFLA programme and is currently researching the post-course impact of teacher training programmes.

Lorraine Lawrence has worked in secondary and higher education in Zambia, the U.K. and South Africa. She is currently Senior Research Fellow in the Education Policy Unit at the University of Fort Hare, South Africa. She holds a Ph.D. from the University of Zambia - her present research interests focus on classroom studies in South Africa as a basis for curriculum reform and the development of teacher education.

Judith Kennedy is a lecturer in the Centre for English Language Teacher Education, University of Warwick lecturing on the Master's programme and responsible for the B.Ed. TESOL programmes. She has formerly held posts in both Africa and the Arab world spanning both ESP and teacher education. Her research interests within the area of teacher education stem from a background in psychology. She is currently authoring a book on Innovation and Teacher Education..

Pirjo Pollari received her Master's in English Philology from the University of Jyväskylä, Finland and has worked as both a language teacher and a teacher trainer. She is currently working as a researcher at the Institute for Education Research at the University of Jyväskylä. Her research interests concern student-centred learning and she is currently working at the Centre for English Language Studies, University of Birmingham.

Rachael Robert's experience extends from language teaching and teacher training in Brazil, ESP and materials development in Portugal to teacher development work in the UK. She has worked as an examiner for the Cambridge Examinations Board and is now a Director of Studies at International House in Poland where teacher development and action research is an important focus of her work.

Yang Ruiying is a lecturer in English at Xian Jiaotong University, Shaanxi Province, China. She recently completed an MA at the Centre for English Language Studies, University of Birmingham.